NOTICE.

THE Besidents of Chow Tow Tsui make the following announcement:— The establishment of the How Yik Hong, Ootton Yarn Spinning Factory, at Chow Tow Taui, at Honam, Canton, has caused a great deal of anxiety and danger to the people in the neighbourhood, as sparks of fire which come out from its furnace, are flying about both day and night over the tope of the neighbouring houses. Lately a spark fell on some bedding which was put on the roof of the Yu Cheong Shop to be sun dried, and it took fire, but fortunately it was quickly suppressed. On one occasion, the timber of a bouse took fire from the spark, and on another occasion, which was on the 2nd day of this moon, the timber of a neighbouring bouse again caught fire from the same cause. Fortunately it was not midnight, so that the flame was extinguished by the timely arrival of the fire engines belonging to this section of the city. Considering that this kind of danger would never come to an end, a public meeting was hold in the temple next day, and to ensure safety of livesand property, and it was agreed that the proprietors should be ordered to remove or stop the work altogether. Mr. Lee, the landlord of the Factory, a resident, of Ngow Chow Street, was present at the meeting, and it was understood from him that he let the house to the proprietors only as a private residence, and not as a spinning factory, as it was afterwards converted to be; and in order to prevent the danger of fire, he said he wished now to discontinue the lease. Mesers. Fung, Lo, Kwan, and other managers of the factory, promised at the meeting to stop the work, and to consult with Messre. Cheong, Ng. Wong, and other shareholders about removing the business to another spot, or, as they promised, to stop the work altogether, with a view to ensure safety to all parties. According to the law of this Province, all brick-kilps or furnaces are required to be erected in isolated and lonely spote, with a view to prevent danger, and ensure safety. With this law before us, it should be strictly obeyed. Moreover, the danger caused by the furnace of this spinning factory is greater than brick-kiln. All of us are of the same country, possessing N EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL conscience, how is it that the public is thus in-A MEETING of the SHAREHOLDERS of volved in danger? It is scarcely the province of a newspaper to discuss so fine a legal question as the value or admissibility of any given testimony; but we think it may, without any appearance of presumption in questioning the view taken by Judge Ball, be fairly sugargument and for very careful consideration. The Judge, when the point was first raised, took exception to the length of time which had elapsed being pleaded as a reason for urge the fact as a point in the case. The length of time was not a reason for a non-suit; but it might fairly be considered as affecting the nature of the testimony that would be expect. ed from the Defendants, and as being a valid reason for their bringing forward only second best evidence, though, if the case had been brought at an earlier date, they would have been called upon to bring best evidence. That a typhoon had occurred at the time the steamer put back, there was no doubt, and Mr. Weller's testimony as to the state in | the defendant. which the vessel arrived was the best evidence place in the interim. If this evidence were here that the argument concerning the length of time which has been allowed to elapse came into force. This was clearly the cause Plaintiff's own fault that the matter could not be fully established; so that the presumption any material testimony, was in this case, not

The Before the case proceeded further, Mr. Lepissior said he wished to make some remarks us to Mr. Beer's status before the Court. The peculiarity of this affair was that the aggressor appeared as prosecutor—the reason of that being that he (defendant) bad been unable to obtain information as to Mr. Beer's nationality. and consequently did not know before what court to sue him. He (defendant) had applied to the French Consul to get information on this point, and had learnt that the Consul believed Mr. Beer was born at Lyons, but that he had refused to register him as a French subject, because he had not complied with the French laws with regard to conscription. Then on the 4th October, he (defendant) had again sent to the Consul, asking him for advice as to what he should do in order to find out Mr. Beer's nationality; and again, on the 5th October, he had written to the Consul etating that he wished to bring an action against thing as a binding custom in Hongkong at pre- Mr. Beer for defamation, and asking how he could secure information about his nationality, because the mutter was of very great importance. On the 6th October, the Consul replied that according to the treaties, foreigners in Ohina could be sued before their respective Consule—the natives of countries that had no treaties or no Consuls, could, with certain exceptions, as in the case of the Greek Connecessary, at a fixed age, to qualify himself as a Frenchman; and that he believed Mr. Beer's family was of German origin, but he had no means of verifying that officially. Defendant considered the only course that remained to him after that, was to address all the Consuls of nations represented in Shanghai. He did so, asking each of them whether Mr. Beer was registered in their Consulate, as he intended to bring an action against bim. After getting their replies he again addressed the Consul General for France, saying he had made an enquiry at the other Consulates, the result of which went to show that Mr. Beer was not registered in the Consulates of the Low Countries, the United States, sia. Defendent bad found himself in a position calling for legitimate selfdefence, and had therefore not heaitsted to fire at his aggressor, who, whilst the pistol, a revolver of six chambers, of which five were onded, was being presented, had already gone a distance of twelve yards. It was important to consider that defendant did not trouble himself to follow his aggressor, and in fact he fired without looking at him, simply ruising his hand with the pistol in it to the level of his diaphragm. That shot was necessary to clear defendant's honour from the abuse Mr. Beer ad heaped on it, and inflicted damage very lifferently serious from that done by Mr. Beer. POLITICAL LEAGUES.

Conservative wits have been very merry for the last few days over the story of Mr. Gladatone and the Greenwich Advanced Liberal Association. It seems that the Advanced Liberal Association of Greenwich has held a meeting to pass a vote of confidence in Mr. Gladstone, and to ask him to come down to Greenwich and discourse to his constituents upon affairs of State. There was, however, a most unlucky split in the advanced Liberal camp; some of the advanced Liberals present being so advanced as to regard Mr. Gladstone's policy with mistrust. Accordingly, when "motion was made and question put." it was found that the ayes and the noes were evenly balanced. Herenpon the chairman became the Deus ex machine. His casting vote carried the day The motion of confidence was duly passed, and the proceedings of the Greenwich Advanced Liberal Association were next day reported at full length in the Daily News. One would have thought that such a fiasco was in itself a sufficient indignity; but there are some spiteful people whose delight it is to mutilate the slain. and accordingly the News, not content with its report, also publishes a letter, in which "a Greenwich Radical" falls upon the Greenwich Advanced Liberal Association with all the fury LAW COURTS IN THE FIJI ISLAND. of a Bonaiab. And it is doubtful whether even the "Greenwich Radical," in his philosophic watch tower of isolated wisdom, is better acquainted with what he calle "the true bearing of all important political onestions? than are the fifty or so "worthy men" upon whom he lavishes his contempt. The show and pretence of organisation with no strength behind it may serve to move a smile, and to provoke a reminiscence of the army of Bompastes. Behind it lurks the reality of political education, and of growing familiarity with those simpler elements of drill which are essential to the success of any great political

The latest news from Fiji states that the Provisional Supreme Court has been established, with three judges-one a native, a Crown prosecutor, and other officers. The newly established court, in addition to several murder pases, has had to undertake the heavy task of some political trials—those of the Loyon chiefs for high treason. The Lovonis came into Levuka, and gave in their formal submission to Thakombau. They numbered nearly 1,000 men, women, and children, and as they were mustered in Levuka, a large number of the Bau forces were gathered fully equipped, in order to overawe their adversaries should any attempt at disorder be made. The process of disarming then took place. It was subsequent by the Anti-Corn Law League first taught to this submission that the political trials took place. In the meantime, in some extra-judicial manner, the whole tribe was collected and condemned in what seems to be a kind of domestic slavery for a term of five years us a punishment and associations and unions have multiplied terrible severity by the tribe. Symptoms of opposition to Thakumbau's constitutional government are increasing. At Nadroga a public meeting of the planters was held, and it was resolved that they would in no way acknowledge or recognize the authority of Thukombau or his quasi ministers. It was also determined "that this meeting highly deprecates the selfish, illiberal, and undignified course of policy thus far pursued by the few gentlemen claiming to realde in Levuka, and who have so unceremoniously attempted to thrust themselves upon an unwilling public.' But at Levuka it appears that the prospect of the unwonted excitement of political elections of representatives to the meeting of delegates was viewed with great interest.

	HOME TROM THE HOLIDAYS.
	(Pall Mall Gazette.)
	Now that the holiday esseon is drawing to a olose it would be well for those who are returning home from mountain or sea-shore to subject themselves to a little self-examination before they again enter upon the every-day duties of life. A few questions such as the following
-	might be put with the advantage: -Have I really "enjoyed myself" during my absonce d	from home? Am I my the better for the expedition, or, on the contrary, the worse ? If from my office stool and straightway accord Mont Blane without any previous training for the feat? Have I not, although told that I POSTITED TOOK from all of mithous interior later required rest, travelled without intermission day and night for six weeks? Have I not on the strength of boing recommended "sea bathing" frequently remained in the ocean for an hour at a time, bobbing up and down in it and otherwise disporting myself for the amusement of the spectators on the sands, and at last with difficulty regained a damp batting ı	machine, from which I have emerged blue with cold and in such a state of exhaustion that I was compelled to have recourse to stimulants, preferring the chance of delirium tremens to the certainty of rheumatic fever? Did I not on my departure from home leave the key of the cellar lying on my study table, thereby canning myself no small anxiety during my "relaxation"—anxiety fully justified by the emaciated appearance presented by my small stock of wine on my return, which painfully contrasts with the enlarged countenance of my cook and housemaid and my trusty man servant? Did I not leave annual my gas rate and my poor rate and my water rate, and a host of little bills, which I had piled up like a horrible nightmare of a mountain grimly threatening to fall on me and crush me? Last, but not least, is there any necessity for all my friends and acquaintances to ask me with a silly smile, "If I have some back to my work

And his father owns an ass. Sir William Napier in his bistory of the Peninsular war, wrote: "In the beginning of each war, England has to seek in blood the knowledge necessary to ensure success, and · like the fiend's progress towards Eden, her conquering course is through chaos, followed by Posthumous Travels.—At a dinner-part the conversation turned upon Captain Cook and, his celebrated voyages round the world, when an ignorant person, in order to contribute his mite towards social intercourse, asked, "Pray, was Cook killed on his first voyage?" - Window Glass per box. 240 a 2.45 "I believe he was," replied a witty lady ; "though | Srakirs Pronuce, ac., he did not mind it much, but immediately entered upon the second."

UNDENIABLE CREDENTIALS.—A certain gentleman, being a candidate for an appointment calling for high moral and intellectual endowments, was asked if he had ever passed any examination at a University or before the Civil Service Commission. He replied, "No, he had not done that, but he had undergone an examination in Bankruptcy three or four

DEATH OF A PRINCE BY STARVATION. Pundjeeb, eldest son of the Maharajah of Labore, has just died in Paris, of hunger, in a lodging-house of the Rue de Vaugirard. This Prince left his native country about fifty years | Campuon, packed, ago in consequence of a serious offence against his father, one of whose wives he had seduced, and since that time he had led a miserable existence in the French capital. He was well known by sight to the neighbours, but the landlord alone could tell his history. He spoke rarely, and adopted the European costume only Musses, Dry Siam large, Scorr's Poetry.—Scott is not one of the

But the poetry, which was first admired to ercess and then rejected with undue contempt, is now beginning to find its due lovel. It is not poetry of the first order. It is not the poetry of deep meditation or of rapt enthusiasm. Much that was once admired has now become rather offensive than otherwise. And yet it has a charm, which becomes more sensible the more familiar we grow-the charm of unaffected and spontaneous love of nature; but not only is BLACKFRIARS ROAD, LONDON, ENGit perfectly in harmony with the nature which Scott loved so well, but it is still the heat cenery.—Cornhill Magazins,

M. Tatne's "Ante on England." (From the Paris Temps.) I have been introduced to John H-, a young and very obliging barriater. He lives in the Tomple, a sort of nest of lawyers and law-students in which a multitude of chambers remind perfectly rendered. one of a Quartier Latin and of a law corporation. The institution is composed of four Lunk of Court, each of which possesses a Hall wherein the members dine, the student's objet duty being to eat, six dinners here every term for three years. A year's attendance in a barrister's chambers entitles the student to be called to the Bar without attending lectures. The professors are six in number, and attendance at a final examination is optional. There is no resemblance between this and an important Law School like ours, founded to teach the theory in the first instance. In like manner there is no Polytechnic School here; he who wishes to become an engineer enters an engineer's office, where he learns by practice like a printer's assistant. This deficiency in highclass and systematised instruction, this omisthe theory of a profession, is very noteworthy. eyes. To my mind the effect of reading Shakeand is thoroughly English. Besides, it would be no easy matter to deliver a course of lectures his personages so well when they are placed on English law. The law is not codified, as in France, upon accepted philosophical principles, but consists of a mass of statutes and precedents, more or less incongruous and sometimes. contradictory, which the future jurist must himself digest after long study. On the other hand, there is no school of History as in Germany, characterised by delicate that and com-was named to me whose income was from £30.0^0 to £35.000. Let us attend a sitting of the Courts at Westminster. In civil as in criminal causes a jury is employed, its duty always consisting in settling difestions of fact as distinguished from points of law. But a jury is employed in civil causes only at the request of the parties, who have to pay the jurymen certain fees. We were present at three trials. One was a divorce case, in which the wife was the petitioner. This right has cessed to be an aristocratic and most costly privilege; it can now be exercised for the sum of £25 or £30, and is thus brought within reach of the humblest purse. Moreover the reports of these divorce cases, which frequently appear in the newspapers, deserve last, but unwashed, the reason given by the to be read, because they unveil one of the and brutality of the husbands. The duty of connect is very noteworthy, and is very different from that of French advocates. They examine witnesses as well as plead. At the hearing the plaintiff, the defendant, and each witness are examined and cross-examined by counsel. The two counsel turn their man toktering legs, and loosened tongues. The third, juside out in encession, try to trip him up. to disconcert him, to make him contradict himself. Certainly it is not at all pleasant to be a witness in England, the quarter of an hour the reason was that she had taken too much at passed in the box being most trying. As a the Exhibition. I believe that among wellconsequence, the burden of the trial is borne by the counsel, the judge's function consisting merely in supervising, forbidding certain questions, tempering the ardour of the champions in court, as the Queen tempers the ardour of parties in Parliament. Such an active and varied 1870, furnishes material for curious speculapart as that played by counsel largely contributes to heighten their importance and charpen takes great interest in the recovery of ladies their wits. With us they are too often phrase. spinners who plungs into rhetorio, and whom the judge has to silence; here, they are qualified, like our "Judges d'Instruction," to fathom and control men's minds. Three or four of them, with their pieroing eyes, clear and thrilling socents, rapid and decided gestures, appeared to me to be first-rate foxes into whose clutches I should not like to fall. The wife whom I saw under examination stood in a little with an accent of conviction, the word "never";

More than once I have thought that if Justice herself could speak she would employ this style of language. The man himself is THE Two Commodious 8 Roomed HOUSES, transformed into the simple organ of truth and | L known as 1 and 2, Westbourne Villas, of rectitude. Gas and Water assenting to the justice of his sentence, I know | laid on. Apply to no other spectacle which can as solemnly imprint in men's hearts veneration for the law. Yet in this, as in other cases, the bad and the good commingle. I am told that the result of the English form of legal procedure is to protect the individual at the expense of society. that it is too difficult to obtain legal proof, and that many guilty persons go unpunished.

.Good society does not go to the theatres, with the exception of the two opera houses. which are the exotic and hot-house plants of luxury, and in which the prices of admission are enormous and evening dress is imperative. As to the others, the audience is recruited from among the lower middle-class. There is no longer a national Comedy in England; playwrights translate or adapt French pieces. This is very extraordinary; for they have still living manners fitted for representation on the stage. In addition, their novels prove how well they can depict characters. Satirio humour they have always had in abundance; during the last century they had excellent comic dramatists and performers. How comes it, then, that in London there is no Comedy, and that in Paris there is one? Is it because there is a scarcity of droll personages in England P. It appears to me that they abound more than elsewhere, seeing that types are there more sharply defined and are developed even to axcess. Is it because prudery of manuers tabous laughter? There is no hindrance to decent merriment, improper joking being alone forbidden. Is it because English reserve has suppressed immoderate gesticulation, spontaneous and free expression of feelings P But the source of intercet hes in the situation, and grave personages can play a part in the most exciting performance. The whole matter is a puzzle, especially for the reader who has just turned over the pages of a novel by Dickens, or of an album by MONT," at present in the occupation of J.

John Leech. This evening I went to the Olympia: a small house corresponding in some measure to our Palais Royal. The opening piece was a burlesque on the Merchant of Venice, filled with puns and jokes. To enjoy such tomfooleries one must be a native of the country. The other piece, Dearest Mamma, is based on Balle Mera et Gendre. Addison, one of the actors, plays the part of an old nucle with surprising spirit city. and fidelity. Imagine to youself a large, bald, and hearty gentleman, rotund, with his coat closely buttoned, thoroughly enjoying life, wellpleased to be a widower and unattached, uniformly good tempered, wholly concerned in preserving "his equilibrium;" who eats his six repasts and takes his three constitutionals daily, who hums tunes on all occasions, who winds up his contences with a whistle like that of an old blackbird, who drops off to sloop in every easy chair, and who, hardened by the tempests of wedded life, wags his bend, and ends by snoring comfortably when he is being soundly raled. The type is complete, both morally and physically; it is original and sym pathetic, very comical and very natural, and Shakespeare is played at intervals. I once suw Mr. Macready in Macbella, in which he showed himself powerful and dramatic, especially in the scone where Banquo's ghost appears, and where, breathless with fear and with a hoarse cry, he casts himself on the ground like a maddened bull. The public still laughs when Hamlet says in the churchyard that the noble dust of Alexander might now be used to stop a bung-hole. Our eyes have been too much ohanged by habit; we have lost the naivete of the sixteenth century; the illusion is deatroyed by the too frequent shifting of the scenery; we cannot now believe in the armies represented by six combatants, and in battles fought upon the stage. Even in England educated persons would be disgusted to witness Cornwall publicly plucking out Gloucester's by representing them; at least I do not realise.
